PPC Guru runs Meta (Facebook & Instagram) lead campaigns for construction and renovation companies, turning local homeowner interest into direct conversations. Across two firms, the accounts generate roughly 100 messaging conversations a month in the latest period, at a cost per conversation around $20 for the mature account.

About the Client

This study covers construction and home-renovation companies that PPC Guru manages on Meta. Their customers are local homeowners planning basements, additions and renovations — people who respond well to visual proof of work and an easy way to start a conversation. Meta's reach and Messenger flow make it a strong fit for turning that interest into direct enquiries.

How the Account Came to PPC Guru

Both companies came to PPC Guru to build a predictable local lead pipeline on Meta. One (Projects Pioneer) launched with PPC Guru in early 2026 and now has a full quarter of optimized delivery; the other (GCAD Construction) launched in mid-2026 and is in its first month. Both run a messaging objective so homeowners can start a conversation directly from the ad.

The Challenge

What We Analyzed & Planned

PPC Guru's approach for each company is to lead with real project imagery, target local homeowners in the service area, and optimize toward started conversations rather than cheap clicks — then refine audiences and creative as conversation data comes in.

- Run a messaging objective so homeowners can enquire directly from the ad.
- Target local homeowners in each company's service radius.
- Lead with genuine project photos and clear service offers.
- Optimize toward started conversations and refine audiences/creative continuously.

What PPC Guru Did & Why

Messaging objective	Lets homeowners start a conversation instantly — the natural first step for a renovation enquiry.
Local homeowner targeting	Focused each company's budget on its real service area.
Real project creative	Photos of actual work build trust faster than stock imagery.
Conversation-based optimization	Bidding toward started conversations, not just cheap reach or clicks.

Why It Worked

- ✓ Messaging objective that matches how homeowners actually enquire.
- ✓ Local targeting focused on each company's service area.
- ✓ Real project creative that builds trust quickly.
- ✓ Optimization toward started conversations, not vanity reach.

Why Messaging Beats Forms for Renovation Leads

Homeowners planning a renovation want a conversation, not a form. A messaging objective lets them ask a question straight from the ad, which lowers the barrier to enquire and gives the company a warm thread to follow up on. For local trades, that direct conversation is usually a higher-quality first touch than a cold form fill — which is why both companies optimize toward started conversations.

Lessons for Construction & Renovation Owners

- 1 Make it easy to start a conversation — messaging lowers the barrier for renovation enquiries.
- 2 Lead with real photos of your work; homeowners buy trust before they buy a build.
- 3 Target your true service radius so budget isn't wasted on out-of-area reach.
- 4 Give a new account a few weeks of data before judging cost per conversation.
- 5 Follow up on conversations fast — speed to reply drives booked site visits.

The Portfolio Today

Across two construction and renovation companies, PPC Guru generates roughly 100 homeowner conversations a month in the latest period. Projects Pioneer, with a full optimized quarter, runs at about 71 conversations a month near $20 each; GCAD Construction is a newer launch still gathering data. Both give the companies a direct, local lead pipeline they can scale as the conversation data matures.
